INTRODUCTION

Sharing thought about innovations in governance nowadays is a very important tools in fostering innovation in governmental practices and promoting public administration. The aim of the innovations in governance and public administration should not merely be regarded as a fashion or trend. The Innovations can contribute to the promotion of good government, generate effective development, and to the creation of new democratic spaces. As can be easily inferred, the governments that have dealt effectively with increasingly complex national, regional and international challenges have introduced innovative ideas and practices in governance and public administration systems and processes.

At the beginning of the new millennium, governments around the world have been under pressure to respond to the demands of their citizens and to the increasing complexity and change in their global environments. While the challenges are many, the governments need to tackle a number of complex social and economic issues, including poverty, spread of diseases, unemployment, poor education systems, environmental degradation, and so on. So it is also very important to bear in mind that innovation is not an end in itself, but as a means to improve public administration in order to enhance the quality of life of all citizens. Although government today is still central to society, it is now widely recognized that governance is not the sole prerogative of governments, but that civil society and the private sector also have an important role to play in this sphere. For example the citizens no longer perceived as 'passive consumers' of government services, but as part of the solution to deal more effectively with emerging issues.

This book of proceeding provides an overview of innovative governance and underscores the positive impact of knowledge-sharing in development efforts written by public administration experts and other disciplines. It contributes academic thought and approaches to use and adapt innovations in governance. The studies discussed along with the ASPA Indonesia International Seminar and IAPA Annual conference 2012 in Faculty of Administrative Science Brawijaya University, Indonesia. It covers current issues on innovative governance refers to the six sub-themes of main theme, includes; (1) ideology and leadership, (2) Policy and management, (3) Social welfare, (4) Public service and utilities, (5) Community, and (6) sustainable and clean government.

Accordingly, the themes related to the best practices and innovations in governance; examines what makes an innovation transferable; analyses what capacities are needed for governments to absorb an innovation; gives alternatives what government need to make public institutions more accountable, responsive or effective, and finally, looks at some "smart options", or "successful models" also methodologies and approaches, for transferring or adapting innovations and best practices in governance. Taken as a whole, this study provides a comprehensive and authoritative overview of the forms of innovative governance related to development of governance approaches in a wide range of public administration areas.

Abstract: Changes the relationship between central and local governments is not only cause problems in the field of the government management, but also in the social issues, namely the horizontal conflict. This conflict is an endless circle, which can lead to public unrest.

Among the various existing conflicts, one of which is the land conflict. Handling land conflict in the era of local autonomy, has not reflected the state alignments to the public. Changes the relationship between central and local governments have not been able to resolve land issues.

Referring to the problem, this paper was about to offer conflict resolution through the concept of justice for minority rights. Problem solving based on this concept is important to be raised. Along with the democratization process and strengthening of civil society then the conflict has the potential to contribute to social and political instability. Therefore, the problem is important to be resolved. In this paper we described the case of land conflict in Bulukumba, South Sulawesi. Bulukumba case indicates a systematic effort of government and corporations in an effort to resist the people in regaining their land rights and other natural resources.
